

Speaker Profile: Mary Hladio

For more than 15 years, Mary has thrived in times of rapidly changing business and technology environments. She discovered how to re-invent herself to meet the needs of any organization. She has gone from computer analyst, to project manager, to business analyst, to process improvement consultant; and has even been a college professor. Recently, she managed the learning development department of an entrepreneur sales division for a $1.4 billion, Fortune 1000 company. Currently she is the president of Ember Carriers Leadership group, an organizational consulting company.

Despite having asthma and lupus, in 2006 she trained and completed her first full marathon to raise money for a non-profit organization. She continues her training even mentoring other would-be runners, and has completed a second full marathon and several half marathons. This is how Mary approaches life, with a "Can Do!" attitude and she brings this excitement to her sessions.

Mary has an extraordinary ability to blend story-telling, humor and best practices while drawing from personal experience to deliver an impactful and interactive session. Mary has spoken to numerous audiences in North American and internationally, conducting sessions for colleges, corporate functions, running teams, churches, retreats and non-profit organizations.

Mary is a Six Sigma Master Black Belt and holds certifications in project management, public speaking, leadership development and performance coaching.
